Are there usage/frequency limits for the API service?

We are pleased to provide free stock API service covering the majority of our datasets for up to 25 requests per day. If you would like to target a larger API call volume, please visit premium membership (<https://www.alphavantage.co/premium/>).

Why is your realtime and 15-minute delayed US stock market data premium-only? Can I access the data for free?

Realtime and 15-minute delayed US market data is regulated by the stock exchanges, FINRA, and the SEC. As a NASDAQ-licensed data provider, we provide one of the most affordable exchange-approved realtime and 15-minute delayed data offerings in the market. If you find other data sources that are "free", please be vigilant and ensure they are properly licensed by the exchanges to

You support both raw and adjusted intraday/daily/weekly/monthly time series. What adjustment method are you using?

We adjust our open, high, low, close, and volume data by both splits and cash dividend events, which is considered an industry standard methodology. And for many of the API endpoints that return adjusted data, we also provide an option to return the raw, unadjusted data, so that you will have the full flexibility to apply your own adjustment logic as you see fit.

I have built a library/wrapper for Alpha Vantage with a specific programming language. May I open-source it on GitHub?

Certainly - we truly appreciate the help and support from the community to make Alpha Vantage even more accessible and developer-friendly. However, we ask that your language-specific library/wrapper preserves the content of our JSON/CSV responses in both success and error cases. We consider it a top priority that our users get the original debugging and
